Protocol

Adv. Talia Sasson, Chair: “This is the hearing of your appeal, Karim Adiprasito, concerning Johanna’s complaint against you. The first-instance tribunal convicted you and imposed a sanction. You filed an appeal. I have read it, and the entire panel has read your appeal. If you wish to add anything to what you wrote, this is your opportunity. Please proceed.”

What the opening record does - and does not - contain

The official attendance list records Prof. Karim Adiprasito as present via Zoom, but does not list the independent observer who was present and participating in the videoconference. The protocol then proceeds directly to the Chair opening the merits of the appeal. It contains no record of the preceding exchange concerning the request for, or admission of, the independent observer shown in Annex G.

Later acknowledgment within the same official transcript

Interpreter: “I will just note that he did write this earlier, before we started the Zoom.”

Adv. Talia Sasson, Chair: “He wrote that this person would be there, but no one gave him permission.”

Interpreter: “He claims that he requested permission and that there was no objection, so this person…”

This later passage confirms that the observer had been raised before the Zoom session, while the opening attendance record and opening protocol contain no record of that exchange and do not identify the observer as a participant.
